Weather Status:	TODAY: Cold and wet this morning with lingering cloud and rain in the south and east, producing further spot flooding and some sleet in places initially. The rain will gradually clear south-eastwards as the day goes on with just a few isolated showers following in the north and west. Afternoon highs of 3 to 7 degrees with moderate to fresh northerly winds, strong and gusty at times in the south and east, easing later. TONIGHT: Very cold tonight, with widespread frost and icy patches. It'll be a mainly dry night, apart the odd wintry shower in Ulster and north Connacht. While it will be mostly clear for a time, high cloud will start to build in from the Atlantic overnight. Lowest temperatures of 0 to -4 degrees in light variable breezes. https://www.met.ie/forecasts/national-forecast
